

The International Relations Program of Pomona College and United Nations Association of Pomona Valley present

The Security Crisis in the Sahel

Tuesday, September 26, 7 PM

Hahn Hall, Pomona College, 420 N. Harvard Ave.

with Pierre Englebert

Associate Dean & Professor of International Relations and Politics, Pomona College

Professor Englebert has spent more than 30 years studying African politics and development, with a particular focus on Francophone West and Central Africa. He travels to Africa two to three times a year in an effort to understand and address the challenges of postcolonial state formation and development. His research has focused on the resilience of weak states, nationalism and separatism, development and foreign aid, fragile states, democratization and security.
